Dear Marge and Duane:

Back at the office this morning and I hasten to write to tell you how very pleased Kay and I were to share in the reception in honor of "Duane's great achievement". This could only have been possible with the love and understanding that you, Marge, have shown throughout all those trying years.

It was marvelous for Kay and me to recognize that there has been no change in your hat size, Duane, and we both know there never will be!

We were delighted to meet your business associates, and they all are exactly the type of people that you would have surrounding you.

I do feel a sense of pride in having been part of the very early days and your thoughtfulness in remembering that warmed my heart.

We briefly discussed the fact that you are going to be doing some speaking for the S.B.A., and I had mentioned a quotation from Carl Sandburg's first novel, entitled "Remembrance Rock". The words you will read came from a judge who was patterned after the Chief Justice, Oliver Wendell Holmes; and while he does speak of a "patriot", he is speaking of all of us.

The second excerpt is another one that I have used a number of times and it is always accepted. It is taken from "Human Destiny" by Lecomte DuNouy. It, too, is something that applies to each of us, and you are fortunate in having the understanding that all people have dignity and achieve through different means.

I am going to go through my collection of quotations and will pick out those that I think might be helpful to you and will send them along in due time.

Once again, with warmest congratulations and with all our love,

Most sincerely,
